This Week in Wabash

Hello, Wabash,

I hope your week has gotten off to a great start. I was very surprised this weekend when I woke up after a night of heavy storms to see that it wasn't a rainstorm that had occurred overnight but a snowstorm. I thought that groundhog in February said there was only supposed to be six weeks of winter. That animal lied to me. It's supposed to be springtime now. The sun is shining today, but my goodness it is cold. I'm ready for warmer weather, in case you couldn't tell.

I hope you had a chance to check out Saturday's paper. It had two preview stories of events that were coming to the Honeywell Center.

The first one you'll still have a chance to see on Tuesday. It's the 20th anniversary of the musical comedy "Church Basement Ladies." It's based on a book and it's been popular with audiences for two decades now. It sounds like an entertaining show, so you should check it out tomorrow if you have the chance.

The second was for a show that happened Saturday, but you should still go back and read the interview if you haven't already because it was a lot of fun. Three Dog Night performed last weekend at the Honeywell Center and beforehand I had a chance to interview founding member Danny Hutton. He has had quite a career. From starting out writing music for Hanna-Barbera cartoons to recording with Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys to finding instant fame with their first album, he has had quite a career.

I know I've mentioned this before, but I enjoy talking to musicians who have been around a while. I feel like when performers are starting out in their careers they are very image-conscious and they don't want to say anything that's going to distract from the persona they're trying to project. The ones who have been around awhile aren't like that. They've got great stories and aren't shy about sharing.

Well, that's all I have for you today. I hope you have a great rest of your week.

Best,
Rob
